Water in Plants Bibliography, Volume 4, 1978 J. Pospisilová 2013-03-09 From the point of view of individual consumer there are too many scientific papers being produced and published every year, too many to be looked up in the tremendous and steadily increasing number and volume of scientific periodicals and proceedings from all over the world. This is not only the result of the "publish or perish" law, but also - let us hope mainly - the result of the increasing amount of true scientific information discovered. Even in a single scientific field too many papers are to be preselected according to the individual interest and to be looked through in order to see what they are reporting on. [And of course they are too many in these preselected to be read and studied in detail. At the present nobody will help us with this last link of what is called the information chain. But let us not speak about this lamentable point now. Some tools are already well known and have been used to master more easily the overwhelming flood of scientific production as far as the first selection of information is concerned. Bibliographies covering specific fields are one of these tools. They extremely facilitate the preselection and when carefully indexed they give the user much more than a heap of selected titles. Such a periodic bibliography in the field of plant-water relations is still lacking.

Digest of Opinions

2013-05-08 The publication of volume 18 of Deschler-Brown-Johnson-

Sullivan Precedents marks the completion of the compilation of modern precedents of the House of Representatives commenced by then Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler in 1974. The volume contains the forty-first and final chapter in the series as well as an appendix authored by former Parliamentarian Charles W. Johnson, III. Chapter 41 is focused on the budget process in the House and contains precedents from the enactment of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 through 2012. The appendix represents commentary from the perspective of Charles W. Johnson, III, whose service in the Office of the Parliamentarian with seven successive Speakers uniquely qualifies him to document the parliamentary evolution of the House since the publication of volume 1 in 1976. The contributions of former Parliamentarian John V. Sullivan, particularly his vision and leadership in preparing this volume and modernizing the Office of Compilation of Precedents, are gratefully acknowledged.
